This opening section focuses on the history and origins of the equality provision of the Charter. The speakers featured discuss those origins in a philosophical, political and personal context. Each speaker reflects on how the equality rights enshrined in the Charter present great opportunities for future change and evolution in our rights-based democracy.

Speaker Summaries and Viewing Notes

Professor Lorraine Weinrib (Faculty of Law, University of Toronto) (1:32 minutes) Professor Weinrib very briefly positions the Charter in its historical context and suggests that the Charter, and specifically the equality provision (s. 15), are milestones in Canadian social and political history. She explains that Canada has become an international model because of the way the Charter has transformed Canada from a “parliamentary federal democracy” into a “rights-based democracy”. Professor Weinrib also explains the purpose of the conference as a discussion forum for reflecting on the strengths, weaknesses, challenges and future development of the Charter’s equality law.

- This section is best used as a brief introduction to the contents of the rest of this DVD. The clip can be omitted by teachers who intend to focus on only one or two of the included themes.

The Right Honourable Joe Clark (Former Prime Minister of Canada, Former Leader of the Opposition) (6:06 minutes) Mr. Clark focuses on the historical role played by citizens in shaping the Charter. Mr. Clark acknowledges that while the Charter was created primarily by political elites, it is the activism and experiences of Canadians that have shaped the role that the Charter currently plays in our democracy. Specifically he notes that it was activism that led to the inclusion of equality rights in the Charter, and that a dialogue between parliaments, courts and citizens have shaped how those equality rights have been applied and interpreted.

This section is good in particular for Civics classes in order to focus debate on the personal rather than the legal aspects of the Charter.

Justice Peter Cory (Former Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada) (1:55 minutes) Justice Cory’s talk focuses on the historical need for the equality provision by highlighting past examples such as the Holocaust to illustrate the kind of indignities that result from a denial of equality. Justice Cory celebrates the inclusion of s. 15 in the Charter as a necessary safeguard against abuses of human dignity, and as protection which must be seen as central to our understanding of equality. Finally Cory emphasizes that a focus on human dignity will allow equality rights to evolve as our society evolves.

This is an excellent clip to start a discussion of the central role that the concept of “human dignity” plays in our equality law. This clip could also be a starting point for a Civics discussion or activity on international concepts of dignity or as a Law class focus on how the Charter intersects with international law.

- What are common types of prejudice experienced by many Canadians today?
• What does Mr. Clark mean when he suggests that the Charter is “the rocky mountains” of many Canadians?
• What role did women’s groups and other activist organizations play in the drafting and development of the equality rights in the Charter?

Activities

The Importance of Equality

a) Introduce s. 15 of the Charter by placing the word EQUALITY on the chalkboard. Create a mind map using student ideas and their conceptions of equality.
   • Ask – what does it mean to be equal? How does the law ensure equality in society? If equality was not protected what, if any, dangers would this pose?

b) Using the overhead found on page 7, introduce s.15(1). Have a student(s) read the section and explain the meaning and importance of equality rights.

c) Ask students to discuss the following questions:
   • What does the word dignity mean? Student responses may vary but the class should arrive at a definition of dignity such as: having self-worth, self-respect, self-esteem.
   • How does s.15 protect and preserve human dignity? Student responses should reflect that, by definition, s.15 affords equality protection before and under the law, free from discrimination. Thus, this protection ensures that the human dignity is given to all Canadians.

d) Explain to students that the Charter only governs state actions, and explain how this limits the scope of s.15.
The Importance of Equality to Newcomers to Canada

Students are asked to independently conduct an interview of an immigrant to Canada who arrived prior to 1982 using questions provided on page 8. Have students generate a written report based on this interview.

Students can use the information obtained from the interview (i.e. interviewees' experience of discrimination) to complete an analysis of the benefits of the Charter's equality protections. Students then present their analysis in the form of a written presentation. Students can be evaluated based on the quality of their research, analysis, application and communication of the results. In other words, students are asked to compare and contrast Canada pre-Charter (s.15) to Canada post-Charter in the context of a specific example of discrimination obtained during an interview. An evaluation rubric can be found in the Teacher Resources section of this DVD under "evaluation rubrics".

Comparative Law: Equality Provisions

a. Explain to students that each year, the United Nations commissions a team to research and study the overall quality of life in almost 200 countries around the world. From their findings, the UN generates a list called the United Nations Human Development Index which ranks the countries after taking a variety of criteria into account. The HDI examines life expectancy, literacy, education, and standard of living. The highest ranking countries are considered the best countries to live in.

b. Keeping in mind the criteria above, have students generate a list of countries which they think should be in the top 10. Students should work in small groups to generate this list. Each group presents a list of 10 countries. As a whole group, discuss reasons for their selections.

c. The teacher will then share the actual top 10 list (see www.undp.org). The teacher will ask students if there are any countries that they are surprised to see on the list, and whether there are any countries that they were certain would make the list, but in fact, did not.

d. The teacher will explain that in 2006, Canada was ranked 6th. One reason for Canada’s high ranking is that Canadians enjoy rights and freedoms guaranteed by the law. The type of equality rights found in section 15 of the Charter are unique to rights based democracies. While many of the countries on the HDI list have some form of equality rights protecting their citizens, some of the countries ranked lower on the list have no equality rights protections at all.

e. The teacher will explain the following research assignment:

Students will locate the most recent United Nations Human Development Index list and select one of the countries from the bottom half of the list. They will research that country’s equality rights (or lack thereof) and they will complete an organizer chart (Page 9). Students may be asked to present their findings in an oral presentation or they may be asked to write a report. In both forms, students must compare and contrast equality rights of their chosen country with those in Canada. Students can be asked to outline the equality rights of that country, explain how these rights are enforced, and outline the types of prohibited grounds of discrimination. Students can assess whether the nature of equality rights in both countries impacts on where they are ranked on the HDI list.

Historic Discrimination

a) Ask students to recall Grade 10 Canadian History lessons which outlined the instances in which the Canadian government discriminated against particular minority communities such as women, non-Christians, etc. Brainstorm some of those incidents on the board.

b) Explain how this discrimination necessitated the creation of s.15 of the Charter.

c) Have students research any one of the incidents listed in class or on Page 10. Teachers can evaluate based on criteria outlined in the evaluation rubrics within the Teacher Resources section of this DVD.
